25 Years of Impact on Iowa

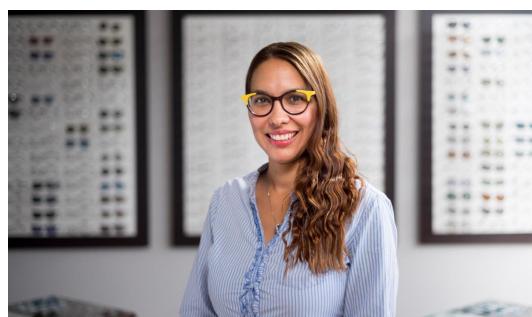

"This kind of certainty comes but once in a lifetime."

Twenty-five years after "The Bridges of Madison County" first lit up the big screen, we're certain it's made a lasting impact on Iowa. The movie was released in theaters June 2, 1995, and the rest is history.

From the book, to the movie, to the annual festival in Winterset, to the thousands of tourists from around the world who flock year-round to Madison County businesses, it's amazing to consider the cultural and economic impact this film has had on our state.

We can't wait to tell more Iowa stories and create more homegrown films through our Greenlight Grants, which we hope will make stars out of more Iowa filmmakers and communities.

Artistic Films

The Interrobang Film Festival is moving forward even though its host, the Des Moines Arts Festival, has canceled its plans for later this month. Interrobang will be presented in real time June 26-28 through Vimeo. Anyone with a Smart TV, tablet, phone or similar device can download the free app to tune in. There will be lots of fun films from around the world, curated just for you.

The production unions and guilds have released a joint safety report as a follow-up to the Industry White Paper that was released on June 1. "The Safe Way Forward" is a 36-page report detailing safety guidelines for film and television

MediaMaker: Ruth Mataya Gango

To celebrate the fifth season of "The Film Lounge," we decided to check in with some of our program alums to see what they're up to now. We caught up with Season 2 contributor Ruth Mataya Gango of Dubuque through Zoom. She's a talented artist on many platforms who is getting ready to shoot her second short film this summer.

Retro Cool

The Des Moines Underground Film Festival is all set for 9:30 p.m. Friday, June 26, at a pop-up drive-in theater in Ames. Count on a 90-minute mix of short films by Iowa artists as part of Art Week Des Moines. We can't wait to watch films again together (but safely apart) on a fun summer night!
